

Louis B. James

Raphael Taylor, CS-B, October 25 – November 29, 2015
Opening reception October 25, 6-8PM

Louis B. James is pleased to present CS-B, a solo exhibition by Raphael Taylor, which consists of a single custom-made sculpture comprising a ceiling within the gallery's basement exhibition space. Taylor's work makes reference to objects and larger systems that have their origins in mass-production. Fashioned out of galvanized steel, this work's topological form is an iteration of a typical, commercially available suspended ceiling system. Like the manufactured ceiling itself, the sculpture features a parallel grid that spans the room from wall to wall. Through the addition of this familiar routinizing form, Taylor shifts our perspective within the room, playing with perceived light and space.

Raphael Taylor (b. 1982) lives and works in New York, NY. He has exhibited in group and solo shows, most recently at Rear Window in Harlem. This is his first solo show with the gallery.
